

An evening with Lisa O'Neill

Lisa O'Neill started writing songs and music at an early age in her native Ballyhaise, County Cavan. She moved to Dublin, aged 18, to study music on a full time basis. Early on she was welcomed into the folk and traditional scene in pubs and venues around the city where her singular voice, witty lyrics and observations on modern Irish life gained her popularity and set her apart as a unique talent.

Her independently released debut album, aptly titled "Has an Album" was launched in August 2009 and sold out throughout the country displaying her popularity not just in Dublin but nationwide.

Lisa has toured North America, Canada and the UK, opening for Welsh singer David Gray. She's currently working on her second album.
